Marguerite Fader Harris

Marguerite Fader Harris was born in New York City on November 2, 1904. She attended Columbia College and received her B.A. degrees in French and German before returning to New York to become a teacher. In 1932, she married John Fader, a noted composer and concert violinist. The couple moved to Paris in 1935, where Marguerite worked as a freelance translator and writer. She returned to New York in 1939, where she continued her work as a translator and writer. In addition to her work as a translator and writer, Marguerite was also active in the women's rights movement, and she was a member of the International League of Women Voters. She died in New York City on July 2, 1986.
