

WORKING FOR AN AGREEMENT.

Arbitration Commissioners Were Hard at It Until Late.

The Arbitration Commissioners were at work early yesterday morning, and the first persons they sought were the members of the Executive Committee of the strikers.

This meeting was held in the Hotel St. George, and, using the information they had obtained at the hearing of Tuesday, the Commissioners labored with the strikers to take a step toward a compromise.

They were successful after a while. The men offered to withdraw their demand for an additional 25 cents a day, and to make other slight concessions, the entire effect of their change of front being to bring about
